Friday, August 19th, 2:03 PM

The big earth-moving equipment has arrived and they have finally begun clearing our lot. The trees you see in the background are staying and will be a nice picture frame for the house once it's built. It's going to take some time before the pad is ready. We still don't expect to be in the new house until Q4 next year, hopefully in time to celebrate Christmas with the family.

This is the southerly view of the entire building pad under construction. When they are done, the pad will be more than four feet higher than what you see today. They still have a LOT of rock and dirt to move to build it up to that level. If you look carefully, you can see Liz and C&C to the far right of the top picture. This also gives you an idea how green everything is due to the recent monsoon rain.

I am back home after a marathon 14 1/2 hour, 871 mile drive from Chico, CA to Prescott, AZ with a small detour through my hometown of Dos Palos. I am not a big fan of driving this far in one stretch or driving in the dark. But I was tired of being on the road and wanted to see my girls who greeted me warmly when I got home. I dropped Liz off at the Sacramento airport and she flew back to PHX, picked up Cara & Cassie from their sitter, and drove home. She beat me back by only four hours.

It's always fun to come back home after a long roadtrip and see how much progress they've made on our new house. The building pad is nearly complete. They have run into a big rock on the SE corner of the lot where the garage will be located. Not sure if they are going to have to use any explosives to get it out. If you look carefully in the 2nd photo you can see Cassie checking out the big CAT that is removing the remaining rock. The highlight of C&C's day is to travel up to the lot where they get to run around without leashes for 10 minutes or so.

It's always fun to come back home from a trip and see the progress the builder is making on our new home. They have now completed the perimeter of the foundation. The next step will be to dig the trenches and connect all the pipes from the street for water, electricity, sewer and cable. Then dig a big hole for the propane tank as there is no natural gas at Talking Rock. The cement pillars you see in the foreground are for the covered patio that will run the whole length of the back of the house.
